Privacy. At a glance.

The intended privacy arrangements in plain language. The full notice explains the details.

Who is responsible for your data?

The controller for swarmalpha is RSQ Technology Ventures GmbH, Friedrich-Ebert-Straße 1, 84164 Moosthenning, Germany. For privacy questions, contact privacy@rsq-technologies.com.

What happens when you visit?

Your browser needs to exchange technical data to display a page. This includes your IP address, the time of the request and the page requested. These data also help identify errors and attacks. The legal basis is our legitimate interest in providing a secure, reliable service.

If you contact us or submit feedback, we use the information you provide to deal with your request.

What can you choose?

The planned approach is to select the language through the page address, without a persistent language cookie. Read-only pages should work without a session wherever possible. Necessary sessions are intended to end after no more than two hours of inactivity.

We need your prior consent for storage or access on your device that is not strictly necessary. You can withdraw consent at any time for the future.

How is your data protected?

We use Cloudflare and our own security systems to protect the service against misuse. This may involve processing technical connection data. Measures must stay within their security purpose. A specific incident may require evidence to be preserved temporarily. Security does not justify unlimited monitoring.

Who receives data, and for how long?

Technical service providers may process data for us. Cloudflare may also process data in the United States.

Our planned deletion period for our own routine access and error logs is no more than seven days. Contact and feedback data should normally be deleted 90 days after the matter is closed. Necessary evidence and records subject to legal retention duties are handled separately.

What are your rights?

Subject to the legal requirements, you can request access, correction, deletion, restriction of processing and data portability. You can object to processing based on legitimate interests for reasons relating to your particular situation. For direct marketing, you can object at any time without giving a reason.

Use our privacy contact address to exercise your rights. You can also complain to a data protection authority. The full notice explains these rights and their limits.